Most who use the County's public land records database are professional title searchers, real estate attorneys, realtors, paralegals, and surveyors. In addition, a few times a week, citizens call or come to the county Deeds office to verify the ownership of their property records. In addition, you may also find it instructive and fun to trace the ownership history of your current home.

Citizens can do this themselves from the comfort and privacy of their own homes.

In addition to our electronic records, we also have books dating back to when the Dutch granted lands from 1646 to 1657 and when the Duke of York granted lands until 1680.

For records before January 30, 1874, the books are in the Deeds office. Thereafter, look online.

We don't have all records: the British destroyed some when they captured New Castle during the Revolutionary War!

Regardless if you are a monthly subscriber or a personal/casual user, the payment interface system will prompt you for basic credit card information (not your address, email or phone number). Follow the instructions on the screen to complete the electronic payment process.

You are also welcome to come to the Deeds office and use one of our public access computers. Ask one of the clerks to print out the documents you want for $1.00 per page.

Now, you can ensure the title to your home doesn’t contain unpleasant “surprises,” and explore the history of your property. We recommend you take the next step and register for Property Fraud Alerts to keep on top of what is recorded in your name. Go back to the “Welcome to Kent County Real Property Search page” and select Property Fraud Alert in paragraph 2.

Note: When documents are recorded, each entity associated with the document is “indexed” for future searching. This information includes owner’s name, other owners’ names, mortgage companies, lien holders, etc. If you see a name you do not recognize, immediately contact the mortgage company or closing attorney for explanation. If you detect fraud, initiate a police investigation from the jurisdictional agency over the property. Do not contact the Deeds office as we cannot offer legal advice.
